

Mrs. Kim's K-News

January 20, 2012

Dear Families,

The half of the class got the reading assessment done. Half more to go!

Remember that there's no school on Monday for students.

The following are the objectives the students learned this week:

Language Arts:

We got to share our observations on Jan Brett's books. The students talked about how her stories are similar and different. Then they discussed what made her stories interesting. They talked about the author's craft.

Math:

The students got to name positions using ordinal numbers. They also showed numbers by adding different numbers.

Social Studies:

The students got to talk about how houses are built differently in different places around the world. They learned the importance of having houses built to the needs of the people. They also learned that the weather of the region determine the design of the houses.

We had a special guest coming in today to share her knowledge on designing and building houses. Mrs. Hochman is an architect, so she came in to talk about her job and teach us a few things about the houses around the world.

Have a wonderful weekend.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Kim

Important Dates

Reading and Math Assessments: this month starting next week.

Jan. 16: no school

Jan 20: end of 2nd marking period

Jan 23: no school for students

Feb. 1: report card goes home