participate in experiences intended to enrich and educate in leadership, communicating, self-discovery and direction. These activities include network building, contributing to their community through SSL hour service, being provided with real-world experiences such as mentoring/site visits with industry leaders, research and technology assignments to reinforce their work experience and seminar topics and projects with cross-cultural understanding of the role of a global society. Georgerica says that the program is “eye-opening as it teaches you how to budget for college and puts you in touch with people who work in the career you’re interested in”. There are a total of five sessions the students attend.
